

Every Child Matters

Orange Shirt Campaign

Orange Shirt Day is a legacy of the St. Joseph Mission residential school commemoration event, first held in Williams Lake, BC, in 2013. It grew out of a former student's account of having her shiny new orange shirt taken away on her first day of school at the Mission. The orange shirt is meant to recognize the harm done to residential school students and show a commitment to the principle that every child matters! There were residential schools in operation in Canada until 1996. A date in September was chosen because it is the time of year that children were taken from their homes to residential schools, and because it is an opportunity to set the stage for anti-racism and safe and caring policies for the coming school year. It is worn in the spirit of reconciliation and hope for generations of all children to come.

RVS kids are encouraged to wear an orange shirt on Friday, September 28 to show their understanding that Every Child Matters. In classrooms, their teachers will be sharing various stories, including Phyllis' story about losing her orange shirt, as well as other conversations around this part of Canada's history. Further, we continue to focus on we can each do every day to let our friends, classmates, new students on the school bus and so on, know that they matter.
